DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Geocaching.com (Non Patent Literature, Soggy Bottom, hidden 2/16/02) in view of Worrell et al (US 6,497,443).

Geocaching.com discloses the invention substantially as claimed including providing a commercially available CD holder of an established shape and modifying the case so that it is capable of being a first aid kit (see "Original Contents", bullet number 6). What Geocaching.com does not disclose is the placement of the kit in a CD storage site in an automobile. However, Worrell teaches that it is old and well known in the art of CD storage to provide a storage unit that is located between the driver and passenger, consisting of walls, and can be used as an armrest for the purpose of storing plural compact disc cases (see Fig. 1 and C3, L51-55). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to have modified the invention of Geocaching.com with the storage means as taught by Worrell for the purpose of storing plural compact disc cases.

Conclusion

3. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Brewer et al, Tolerson, Kaszubinski, DeBoer et al, Overholser, McKee and D'Annunzio et al have been cited to show devices having similar structure.
